INTER-CLUB GOLF MATCHES ARE PLANNED

Country Club, Moanalua, Scho-field Barracks and Haleiwa May Get Together in Four-Cornered Team Match

A match play handicap tournament is scheduled for tomorrow over the County Club Course, and with the links in first class condition, and com-petition among the players keen, it is expected that a large field will drive off. Entries must be made at the club house before 10 o'clock to-morrow, morning, when the drawings will be made. Owing to the fact that the tournament will be run off in one day, the rounds will be only 9 in-stead of 18 holes.

Country Club golfers have something to look forward to in the way of competition, for it is understood that several golfing enthusiasts are working on a plan for several interclub matches, between six-man teams, which will probably be pulled off early next month.

Out at Schofield Barracks there are a number of keen devotees of iron and driver, who, although classing below the local players in ability, on account of lack of practice, are more than willing to try conclusions with the town contingent for the sake of good sport. The suggestion was made some time ago that Leilehua and Country Club players get up a homeand-home match, and this led to the broader scheme of getting up a tourhament for four teams, representing Honolulu, Schofield Barracks, Moanalua and Haleiwa. There are not enough regulars at Haleiwa to make this a go, but as nearly all the Country Club men play both the other courses, the suggestion is to divide up, getting eams of somewhat even strength, which would be rivals in name at least, although many would have the same club affiliations.

car Cox and Judge Archie Mahoulu can be counted on, while Frank Halread is now visiting Walalus, and as that is his favorite course, he will undoubtedly be on the team. There are enough players at the Country
